

5 polished Private Business Reception (PBR) style invites you can use for in-home presentations, coffee shop meetups, or casual private gatherings. These are designed to feel warm, exclusive, low-pressure, and curiosity-driven.

Invite #1 — Personal & Warm

Hi {Name},

I'm hosting a small private gathering with a few friends this week to share something I've recently gotten involved with that I'm really excited about.

It's super casual — just conversation, connection, and a chance to see what I've been working on lately. You came to mind because I value your perspective.

Would you be open to joining us?

Invite #2 — Coffee Shop Meetup Style

Hey {Name},

I'm meeting with a few friends at a local coffee shop for a relaxed private business reception to share something new I've been building in wellness and entrepreneurship.

No pressure at all — just good coffee, great people, and ideas worth hearing about. I'd love for you to come sit with us if you're available.

Invite #3 — Exclusive / Curiosity Based

Hi {Name},

I'm inviting a small circle of people to a private reception where I'll be sharing a project I'm really passionate about right now.

It's informal, educational, and honestly just a great excuse to connect in person. I thought of you immediately and wanted to extend a personal invite.

Can I save you a seat?

Invite #4 — Relationship-Focused

Hey {Name},

I'm hosting a small in-home meetup with a few friends to connect and share something that's been making a big impact on my health and business lately.

It's not a big event — just real conversation in a comfortable setting. I'd genuinely love your feedback and company if you're free.

 Invite #5 — Voice Memo Style (Very High Conversion)

Hey {Name}, I wanted to personally reach out because I'm putting together a small private gathering with a few friends to share something new I've been working on.

It's relaxed, low-key, and honestly just a chance to connect and see what's creating so much excitement right now. I immediately thought of you and wanted to invite you personally.

Would you be open to coming?